Parts of Plants We Eat

Many foods come from plant parts. Peanuts are seeds in shells under the ground. We eat beans, too. Seeds are like the “babies” of plants. They give us energy to run and play.

Potatoes are underground stems. People use them to make fries or mashed potatoes (土豆泥). We eat the stem of ginger (姜), too. It adds flavour to dishes.

Leaves are like a plant's “food factory”! They use sunlight to make food. Spinach has soft green leaves. We eat them in salads. Lettuce is crispy and green. It's often in a salad bowl!

Carrots and sweet potatoes are roots. Carrots are orange and hard. Sweet potatoes are soft and sweet when we bake them.

Cucumbers are long green juicy fruits. Tomatoes are fruits with seeds. They are great for snacks or sandwiches.

Broccoli (西兰花) looks like little green trees. We eat it with salad dressing (沙拉酱). Cauliflower is a white “flower ball”. It's healthy and tastes good.
