In ancient times, there was no paper. People had to write on things they found in nature. They wrote in the mud. But the rain washed it away. They wrote on stones and bones. But they were hard and heavy. In China, people once wrote on bamboo slips (竹简), but they were too heavy. They also wrote on silk, but it was too expensive.

In the East Han Dynasty, Cai Lun found a better way to make paper. He boiled tree bark (树皮), old rags (破旧布料) and other materials in a pot. He left it to dry in the sun. It was light and much cheaper. The perfect material to carry information! Knowledge could be stored and shared easily. Then the art of paper-making travelled around the world. By the 19th century, paper was made from cheap, boiled wood. More people had the chance to read. Now look around — paper is everywhere!

() 68. Before paper was invented, what did people use for writing?

A. Paper.

B. Mud, stones and bones.

C. Computers.

() 69. Why didn't people like bamboo slips?

A. Too heavy.

B. Too colourful.

C. Too small.

() 70. How did Cai Lun make paper?

A. With tree bark and old clothes.

B. With metal and glass.

C. With flowers and leaves.

() 71. Why didn't people write on silk?

A. Too cheap.

B. Too expensive.

C. Too thick.

() 72. Where can we see paper now according to the text?

A. Only in libraries.

B. Only at school.

C. Everywhere.

B

The Lantern Festival is an important festival in China. It began 2,000 years ago during the Han Dynasty. It is on the 15th day of the first month in the Chinese calendar (日历) and it marks the end of the Spring Festival celebrations.

People celebrate the festival in many ways. The lantern show is the most important part of the festival. On the eve of the festival, many lanterns are hung in the streets and parks. These lanterns light up the night during the festival. People often go out and watch the lantern shows with family or friends.

Lantern riddle games are also popular during the Lantern Festival. People write riddles on colourful lanterns.
