Where can I travel by train in the UK?

City to city

In the UK, you can travel to many cities by high-speed trains (高速铁路), so there is no need to travel by plane. From London, you can get to other popular cities in the UK, such as Manchester, Edinburgh, Birmingham and Cardiff in just a few hours. The UK's high-speed trains whisk you through (快速穿行) the countryside quickly from city centre to city centre, saving you the time of going to and from the airport.

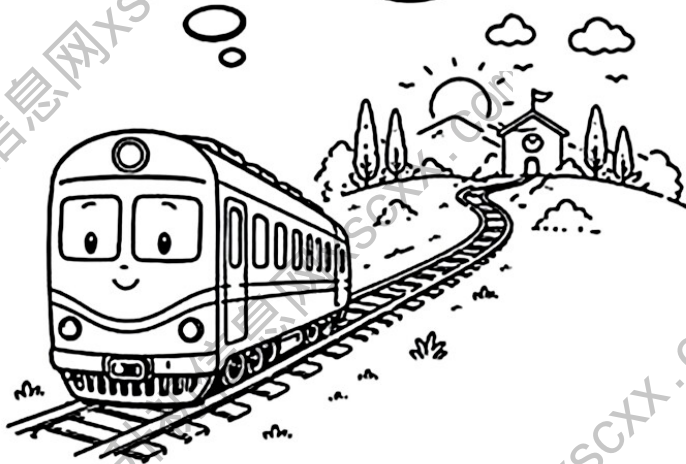

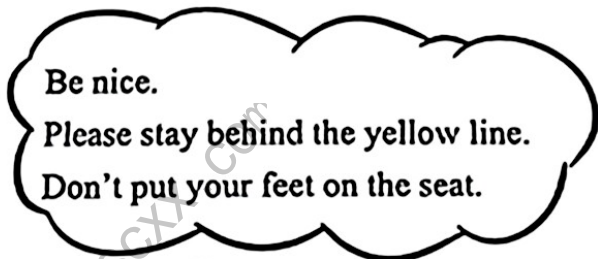

Countryside break

If you plan to travel to the countryside, such as Cornwall, the Highlands and the Lake District, the trains can take you all around the UK. If you're a night owl or want to save time, then a sleeper train could be a good way to travel at night. You can go to sleep in one part of the country and wake up in a new place!

- () 1. You can take high-speed trains to many cities in the UK.
- () 2. Travelling by train is difficult. You need to go to the airport.
- () 3. The Lake District and the Highlands are in the countryside.
- () 4. Look at the map. The travel time from Glasgow to Edinburgh is 2 hours and 6 minutes.
- () 5. Look at the map. The train from London to Brighton stops at Cardiff.
- () 6. Amy wants to leave at night and arrive in the morning. She can take a sleeper train.
